

LOVE WHERE YOU LIVE: EASY HOME PROJECTS THAT BOOST COMFORT & WARMTH

February is a great time to slow down and focus on turning your home into a space you love. With cooler weather still lingering, small updates can make your home feel warmer, more inviting and easier to enjoy throughout the season. These simple projects don't require a major time commitment, but they can have a big impact on how your home feels day to day.

LAYER IN WARMTH WITH TEXTILES

Adding or updating textiles is one of the easiest ways to increase comfort. Throw blankets, area rugs and textured pillows help soften spaces while also providing warmth. Layering different fabrics can instantly make living areas and bedrooms feel more inviting.

IMPROVE LIGHTING FOR COZY EVENINGS

Shorter days mean lighting matters more. Consider swapping out harsh bulbs for warmer tones, adding table or floor lamps or incorporating dimmable options where possible. Soft, ambient lighting can completely change the mood of a room.

SEAL IN COMFORT

Drafts can make even the most comfortable home feel chilly. Check windows and doors for gaps and add weather stripping where needed. Simple fixes like these can help maintain indoor comfort while also improving energy efficiency.

CREATE SPACES MEANT FOR RELAXING

Designating a small reading nook, coffee corner or quiet space encourages relaxation. Comfortable seating, good lighting and personal touches like books or decor can turn everyday areas into places you love to utilize.

Comfort-focused updates help you appreciate your space more, especially during the winter months. Whether you're enjoying a quiet night in or hosting friends and family, these small changes can make your home feel warmer, more welcoming and easier to love.
