

END-OF-SUMMER HOME RESET: PREPARING YOUR SPACE FOR A SMOOTH FALL TRANSITION

As summer winds down, it's the perfect time to reset your home and prepare for the routines and rhythms of fall. An end-of-summer refresh helps your space feel organized, comfortable and ready for the months ahead.

Put Summer Gear Back in Its Place

Start by storing seasonal items like pool accessories, outdoor toys and extra fans. Using labeled bins or designated storage areas makes it easier to find everything again next year and clears visual clutter from everyday spaces.

Refresh High-Traffic Areas

Entryways, kitchens and living rooms often take the most wear during summer. Wiping down surfaces, organizing cabinets and refreshing storage systems can instantly improve function as schedules pick back up.

Swap Seasonal Textures and Décor

Transitioning your décor doesn't require a full overhaul. Replace bright summer accents with neutral or warm-toned pieces. Lightweight throws, new pillow covers or simple table décor can help your home feel cozy without jumping straight into fall themes.

Prep for Back-to-Routine Living

Create simple systems for backpacks, shoes, work bags and daily essentials. A small drop zone near the entryway can make mornings smoother and keep clutter from spreading throughout the house.

Give Outdoor Spaces a Light Refresh

While summer isn't quite over, this is a good time to clean outdoor furniture, sweep patios and tidy landscaping. These small tasks help outdoor areas stay usable and ready for cooler fall evenings.

An end-of-summer home reset can create a sense of calm and help ease the transition into fall. With a little organization and a few seasonal updates, your home can feel refreshed and ready for what's next.
